

Basic criteria Franchise

Your profile

It is particularly important that you are both prepared to work weekends and are able to speak fluent English.

In addition, as a future partner of eat-the-world, you must meet the following criteria:

- Possess excellent personal and communication skills
 - Take an interest in others and enjoy interacting with people
 - Be able to lead a team and inspire
 - Possess organisational skills
 - Be flexible and able to handle pressure
 - Be committed, engaged and highly motivated
 - Be prepared to adopt a predefined external system
 - Possess a knowledge and interest in history, culture, food and architecture
 - Be prepared to implement standards and concepts, and support decisions made by the company
 - Be able to set challenging personal targets and be responsible for your own success
 - Be located in a city with at least four distinct districts (not including the city centre)
 - be sure of your family's support, on weekends too
 - Have your own computer, Internet access and desk
 - Be familiar with Microsoft Office and be Internet savvy
-

As an eat-the-world city partner, you will be confronted with a vast array of managerial tasks which demand entrepreneurial talent. It is therefore of vital importance that you enjoy interacting with people, as not only will you be working with your tour guests, but also with culinary partners and the press. Communicative aptitude will make such cooperation easier, as well as an outward appearance which reflects personal and professional competence.

You must be able to demonstrate initiative and staying power, possess organisational and business skills, and think and act in a success-oriented manner. Of course, you must also be prepared to view the corporate risk and necessary investment as a challenge and an opportunity.